

About Lessons

Last Updated Tuesday, 11 May 2010

When I schedule a lesson, it is normally understood that the "time slot" will be recurring and it will last the entire current season. These seasons mirror the local school year and are typically as follows:

- Summer (June through mid-August)
- School year (mid-August through May)

Most skaters prefer to keep a similar lesson schedule with me year-round. I do my best to accomodate these requests. In many cases I can do this. However, during the Summer schedule, the IceForum typically does not offer as much freestyle time as it does during the School year. This presents a huge problem for both me and some students.

At this point, I schedule my lessons starting with the Highest level skaters first (whom typically take lessons most frequently) and work my way down from there; hopefully, having time for each skater. In some cases, I will reduce the number of lessons each skater takes in order to fit everyone on my schedule. While I enjoy teaching ALL kinds of skaters, the recreational skater will be the first "time slot" removed from my schedule when time is limited. Sorry! I do this to protect and honor the committment of the competitive skater.

This system is always somewhat of a "work-in-progress". I am always trying to make things better or more "fair" for each skater that I work with. I thank each of you for the opportunity to teach skating to you or your child!
